

Annex A

RCIC-IRB responsibilities for PROVINCIAL NOMINEE PROGRAM (PNP) APPLICATION are as follows:

1. Assess Eligibility

The RCIC-IRB assesses the Client's eligibility for PNP based on the documentation and information provided by the Client in accordance with the checklist and questionnaire prepared by the RCIC IRB, while identifying any eligibility, past immigration history, admissibility, or compliance concerns that may affect the application. Review the Client's background (education, employment, language proficiency, settlement funds, admissibility, etc.) to determine eligibility for the selected provincial program. Assess whether the Client meets program requirements, including point grids, employer requirements (if applicable), and provincial selection criteria. Identify any risks, gaps, or weaknesses that could affect the Client's nomination or federal processing.

2. Provide Legal and Procedural Guidance

The RCIC-IRB provides clear legal and procedural guidance to the Client regarding the relevant immigration program, explaining eligibility requirements, documentation obligations, processing timelines, and IRCC discretion. The RCIC-IRB advises on the type and format of supporting evidence required, identifies gaps or weaknesses in the submitted documents, and recommends additional information to strengthen the application. The RCIC-IRB also informs the Client of their rights, responsibilities, and potential risks associated with the application, including the implications of refusals, delays, non-compliance, or misrepresentation, ensuring the Client understands the process and can make informed decisions. Explain expected stages (Expression of Interest, NOI, provincial submission, nomination certificate, and federal PR application) if applicable. Advise the Client on provincial obligations such as intent to reside, employer compliance (if applicable), and settlement expectations. Provide clear instructions on how to gather supporting documents required by the province.

3. Prepare and Submit the Application

The RCIC-IRB completes all required PNP forms, ensures that all forms are properly filled, signed, and, prepares personal statements, affidavits, or explanations when necessary, drafts a professional submission letter (if applicable) outlining the case, uploads all forms and supporting documents to the appropriate provincial portal or submission method, and ensures the application is submitted correctly and within prescribed timelines. Pay applicable government fees on behalf of the Client, where authorized and reimbursed.

4. Monitor and Communicate with PNP Officer

The RCIC-IRB tracks the status of the application, provides timely information related to the progress of the Client's case, and promptly forwards all updates, document requests, or instructions received from PNP to the Client and respond on their behalf in consultation with the Clients.

5. Representation Until Final Outcome of the Provincial Stage

The RCIC-IRB acts as the Client's authorized representative before PNP, communicates on behalf of the Client with relevant authorities as required, and advises the Client on next steps in the event of delays, additional requirements, or upon issuance of a final decision. Explain available options if refused (resubmission, appeal avenues, or alternative pathways—subject to a new retainer and fees).

6. Professional Conduct and Compliance

Provide services with honesty, integrity, competence, and in the Client's best interest.

Comply fully with all requirements of the IRPA, IRPR, and the College of Immigration and Citizenship Consultants (CICC) Code of Professional Conduct.
